

COVID-19 vaccine

HERE'S WHAT YOU NEED TO KNOW

The COVID-19 vaccine is becoming more widely available to certain populations. Don't let misinformation or hearsay cloud your judgement about this effective preventive service. Here are some facts that will provide answers to some questions you may have around the vaccine for the novel coronavirus.

Approved vaccinations

for use*:

Pfizer

2 doses, 21 days apart
95% effective against COVID-19

Moderna

2 doses, 28 days apart
94.1% effective against COVID-19

Johnson & Johnson

1 dose
72% effective against COVID-19

All vaccines authorized or nearing authorization appear to be 100% effective in preventing hospitalizations and deaths from COVID-19.

Is it safe?

YES. The COVID-19 vaccine — and all vaccines for that matter — go through numerous clinical trials to evaluate their safety and effectiveness. The Food and Drug Administration has reviewed the clinical trial data and has authorized the Pfizer, Moderna, and Johnson & Johnson vaccines for emergency use. The safety of the vaccines is also continually monitored following the FDA's review and approval. If you have concerns about whether you should receive the vaccine, speak to your doctor or pharmacist.

Can I get COVID-19 from the vaccine?

NO. All the vaccines that have currently completed or are nearing completion of clinical trials do not contain live strains of coronavirus and can't cause you to develop COVID-19. After the vaccination, you might experience mild side effects, such as fatigue, fever, aches and pains, or pain at the injection site — much like a flu vaccination.

*Approved vaccines as of Feb. 27, 2021, for emergency use by the Federal Drug Administration.

What are the potential side effects?

On the arm where you got the shot:

- Pain
- Swelling

Throughout the rest of your body:

- Fever
- Chills
- Tiredness
- Headache

It's perfectly normal to experience some side effects. But contact your health care provider:

- If the redness or tenderness at the injection site increases after 24 hours.
- If your symptoms worsen or they do not seem to be going away after a few days.

When can I get it?

Visit your state's health department for more information on vaccination availability.

- In South Dakota: doh.sd.gov

Is it covered by insurance?

YES. The COVID-19 vaccine and its administration will be covered at no out-of-pocket cost to you throughout the public health emergency. After the public health emergency ends, the COVID-19 vaccine and its administration will be covered as an Affordable Care Act (ACA) preventive service at no member cost-share, if applicable under your health plan.
